Dyllan Walter, DNP, CRNP, earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in History in 2001 from the University of California - Los Angeles where she graduated with honors. She graduated Summa Cum Laude after earning her Bachelor of Science degree in Nursing in 2005 from Thomas Jefferson University's School of Nursing. She then earned her Master of Science degree in Nursing, and her Post-Masters Family Nurse Practitioner Certificate in 2008, also from Thomas Jefferson University's School of Nursing. Dyllan has served as a family nurse practitioner at North Hills Health Center and Bucks County Family Practice.

Prior to becoming a nurse practitioner, she worked as a Surgical ICU and Intermediate Surgical ICU Staff Nurse at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital. She also serves as an Adjunct Faculty/Clinical Instructor at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

She chose to become a nurse practitioner because she wanted to use her education and experience to improve the health of the community and individual patients. Dyllan strongly believes in the importance of vaccines and considers herself to be a 'go to' person when it comes to questions about immunizations. Her doctoral quality improvement project aimed to increase vaccination rates among adult patients in a primary care setting.

She has spent a good deal of her career focusing on decreasing health disparities among vulnerable populations and applying population health concepts to the outpatient setting to improve outcomes and access to care. As an adjunct faculty member for the College of Nursing at Thomas Jefferson University, she focuses on teaching her students the most up-to-date clinical guidelines.

She has published an article in the Journal of Clinical Outcomes Management and presented posters at professional conferences.

Dyllan is a member of BuxMont NP Group, which is a local chapter of the Pennsylvania Coalition of Nurse Practitioners.

Dyllan is a proud member of Abington Health Physicians, a network of over 200 primary care and specialty physicians.
